

Newsletter from Colin and Norma

Don't be confused by the fish.

December 2007
Of our semi-occasional updates

Hi all,

This is just a brief email to say hello, and give you a quick update. At our wedding there was an opportunity to sign up for our newsletter. Unfortunately, in the move these signup forms were mislaid, so we've just added all our friends we think might be interested. If you are not, please use the links below to unsubscribe from this list. We plan to send semi-occasional updates. If you know anyone who would like to receive our updates, they can sign up at our website: www.peckhams.org

SHORT VERSION:

- 1) Thanks for: recent event and choir commitment.
- 2) Pray for: Norma's job, house hunting

LONGER VERSION:

We have now arrived in Cape Town, into our little one-roomed flatlet that we rent, and are busy trying to find a house. Colin (who hates shopping with a passion usually reserved for the likes of liver and traffic wardens) describes it as "the ultimate shopping experience".

We hit the ground running with a choir rehearsal the day we landed, and an event within six days. The event was a little disappointing as the church seemed (Colin says) "a little strange". Although the congregation seemed to enjoy it, we have still not met any of the leadership, and when Colin invited the preacher up to speak, no-one moved, so we just continued to the end - at which point the preacher decided he did actually want to say something after all. Despite what appears to have been a three-line whip, a large portion of the congregation attended a nearby event that evening as well, so attendance wasn't great.

Norma has started job hunting, and we'd really appreciate prayer for that, as there do not appear to be any vacancies at the moment.

Wishing you a very happy Christmas, and a peaceful New Year.

Yours in the Lord Jesus,
cp & np